Council Adds to Housing Fund

The City Council added $49,730 to the housing loan and grant fund of the Municipal Authority on Tuesday.

The Municipal Authority is the public corporation organized to make loans and grants for home rehabilitation and maintenance to Model Neighborhood residents. In addition to adding to the loan and grant fund, the council extended the contract of the MA through December, 1974.

Program Planning Manager Alonzo Foote Sr. said that the MA had approved 10 rehabilitation grants and nine maintenance grants thus far.

The new contract with the Municipal Authority provides a $15-a-month stipend for the three board members.

Dwight Dudley Graduates

Mr. & Mrs. Curtis L. Dudley and son Curtis II of 2119 S. Sheridan - Tacoma, WN were recent visitors to Bellingham, WN where they attended the June Graduation of their older son Dwight A. Mack from Western Washington State College.

Also attending the graduation was Mrs. G. Blassingill, Dwight's grandmother.

Mr. Mack was home over the weekend to attend the marriage of his cousin Ed Hinton to Miss Bonnie Ligon.

Model Cities Chairman Resigns

Junior N.R. Ellis, Model Cities Executive Board chairman, submitted his resignation from the board at Thrusday's meeting.

The meeting was adjourned before any action could be taken on the resignation. The board could not accept or reject the resignation after the meeting was adjourned.

Mr. Ellis has been chairman of the board for about a year and a half.

Since the resignation was not acted upon, a new chairman has not been named. According to the constitution, the board must elect a new chairman. The vice-chairman does not assume the chair automatically.

The board recommended that General Revenue Sharing funds not be used to balance the city budget at the expense of social programs. A management team in the city had suggested that the federal revenue sharing funds be used to balance the city budget for next year. Such a move would mean termination of many social programs now funded by revenue sharing.

Since Model Cities began many of these programs, the board felt that using the funds to balance the budget would destroy what Model Cities has accomplished in the past few years. Among the programs funded by revenue sharing and started by Model Cities are Senior Citizens, Adult Outreach, Tacoma Veterans Action Center, Homemakers Services, and Environmental Health.

Named to Tacoma school post

The Tacoma School Board appointed Dr. Eugene Breckenridge to a key administrative post Breckinridge has been named assistant superintendent for affirmative action and community affairs.

St. John's Honors "Man of the Year"

On June 16, 1974, Bro. Andrew Hankins was chosen "man of the year" by the Board of Christian Education of St. John Baptist Church.

Bro. Hankins arrived in Tacoma in the year of 1959. He became a member of St. John Baptist Church in 1964. He is a very faithful church worker. His affiliations include Sunday School, Mission, B.T.V., Usher Board and the Deacon Board. He is a very positive thinking Christian and a good Bible scholar. He is a tither. He is an outstanding husband and father. He is the father of two daughters and two sons. He retired from the military and is now the operational manager of the Martha Manor Apts., the Empire Kenyon Apts., The Weller Apts., and the 412 Apts., all of Seattle.

You will always remember his pleasant smile and his firm hand shake. Congratulations Bro. Hankins. May you continue to be an inspiration to all who meet you.

Regional Citizens Director Appointed

The Region Ten Citizens Council has selected Jeremy "Dick" Whittick as its executive director.

Mr. Whittick was busy during the first days on the job meeting with city and state officials. He will be responsible for keeping citizens in Seattle, Portland, Tacoma, Boise and Juneau informed of federal legislation and programs affecting local citizens.

Mr. Whittick was the director of the Upward Bound project in Anchorage, Alaska, where he worked with native Alaskans to help them develop careers. He has experience in writing grants and hopes to make the regional council more than just an information service.

The regional council began a contract on Monday with the Department of Housing and Urban Development to establish an information service to grass roots citizens. The contract ends on Dec. 31, 1974.

Mr. Whittick has a master's degree in Asian Studies from the University of Hawaii. His graduate studies included work in vocational guidance and counseling. In 1973, he was named to the Outstanding Young Men of America.

ISN'T IT ODD how parents struggle to protect their children from the frustrations and difficulties of life? Yet they can't protect them forever. Facing one's own problems—with a little parental guidance to help—is better training, better preparation for the future when parents will no longer be available. People don't grow to full maturity wrapped in cotton.

Woman pastor? Congregation insists on it

CHICAGO — A Chicago Methodist congregation that wants a woman pastor has rejected its bishop's appointment of a man.

A member of the Parish of the Holy Covenant explained Wednesday that the congregation "felt we had to take a stand because women are not getting support" from the Methodist Church.

But United Methodist Bishop Paul A. Washburn says the congregation can't refuse the appointment because "the act is not provided for in the law of the Methodist Church."

And the Rev. Charles Peterson, named to the position three weeks ago but yet to assume it, says he's marking time until the dispute is "worked out between the bishop and the church."

For the past two weeks, congregation members have taken over the Sunday worship services and daily functions of the parish, says the Rev. Donald Elmer, a minister member of the congregation not assigned to the church.

He says the parish first requested a woman minister this spring when its pastor of 14 years announced his retirement.

"We had good experiences with several women seminarians over the past two years, and we decided having a woman pastor now would encourage women in the church," said the Rev. Mr. Elmer, whose wife is a codirector of a national Methodist group to advance women's rights in society and the church.

He said the congregation "wanted someone with experience — not a woman just for the sake of having a woman." He said women, who make up less than 1 per cent of Methodist pastors, "have traditionally been placed in the smaller, rural churches where they have little career mobility."

But the Rev. Mr. Elmer said that instead of taking the congregation's request seriously the church "kept coming up with rules and regulations" and didn't even try to find a woman pastor.

Dear Tac Vac

by Ted Jefferson

Q--I entered active service from South Dakota, had two tours of duty in Vietnam, and have been stationed elsewhere since my return. I had heard that my state had authorized a bonus for its Vietnam veterans, but when I applied it was to late. Is there any likelihood that the deadline will be extended?

A--The South Dakota Legislature has extended the deadline to January 1, 1975. The new law does not extend the service period on which bonus eligibility is based, but merely gives time for late application. Active duty personnel outside the state can obtain application forms by mail from the South Dakota Division of Veterans Affairs, Bonus Office, State Capitol Bldg. Pierre, S. Dakota 57501. For service between July 1, 1958 and Aug. 5, 1964, payment is $20 for each month actually spent in the Vietnam Era. Later service, but prior to April 1, 1973, earns $20 per month spent in Vietnam, and $10 per month for service elsewhere. Maximum bonus for Vietnam service is $500; for others, $360.

Q--My husband, who still has his World War II GI Insurance, named his mother as beneficiary. Can the VA designate me as beneficiary, if I request it?

A--No. Only the veteran may change his beneficiary.

Address all questions concerning veterans to: Tacoma Veterans Action Center, 1301 South "K" Street or 4601 Pacific Ave. Tacoma, Washington 98405. TEL: 383-4008 or 474-4005.

Black Prisoner Released to Show Art at Expo '74

SPOKANE---They let Raphael Medina out of the Washington State penitentiary to go to the Expo '74 World's Fair.

Not that the State had suddenly set up a new recreation program for convicts.

Medina, it develops, is quite an accomplished artist and his paintings were being shown at the Fair, part of the Folklife Festival Expo puts on each week.

One week the Festival features Scandinavians or Basques or Ukranians or Scots. Artisans or ethnic groups who help give the Pacific Northwest its variety and flavor.

Medina was here--under guard--for Afro-American week. He's back, and he is doing a stretch at Walla Walla on a bank robbery rap.

He might be paroled this fall. If so, he will enter the University of Washington to work on a degree in sociology.

When he entered prison in 1969 he had a ninth grade education. This summer he will com plete an Associate of Arts degree (in sociology) at Walla Walla Community College.

"I learned painting just by watching people do it," he said. "I just do it the way I feel it."

He expresses his feeling in portraits--mainly of black leaders. For him painting is a hobby, a way to satisfy his need for creativity.

"I figure if young people did this kind of thing they would have less time to drift on the streets," he said. "Kids would see that life is more than just getting by or ripping something off."

At the Folklife Festival Medina got his ideas across to a good many youngsters, letting them have a go at a canvas.

"At first kids are afraid and don't know what to paint," he said. "But you nudge them along a little bit and pretty soon their imaginations start working. And that's good because then they see how much fun it is."

It's this approach, plus the formal schooling he hopes to get, that Medina wants to use in helping dropouts and delinquents.

"I want to show kids here's a better way than the way I did it," he said.

ACCORDING to the Tax Foundation, federal tax collections in fiscal 1974 will equal $1,179 per person. This is more than twice the $582 per person collected ten years earlier.

Bishop Honored at Benefit

June 22, 1974 - 5:P.M. at OB'riens Restaurant a benefit dinner was given for the Illustrious Bishop of the Washington State Churches of God In Christ. Bishop Altheimer entered to the hearty applause of the more than one hundred persons attending this noted occasion. The beautifully gowned and glowing Missionary Altheimer accompanied his entrance.

Bishop Altheimer is a man of quiet dignity, but he and his wife exude love to all who contact them. Superintendent Charles E. Smith Jr. of Seattle and Mrs. George Jackson (wife of Superintendent Jackson, District No. 3.) spearheaded this dinner.

The formally attired men and women present enjoyed a beautiful evening with this man, who is loved by most who encounter his wisdom and counsel. Along with Bishop and Mrs. Altheimer at the executive table were: Superintendent and Mrs. J.M. Young (Women's Supervisor of Washington State), Mrs. Charles Smith, two guest soloists (Mrs. Bobbie Westbrook and Mrs. Evanine King) and Evangelist Leo C. B Brown of Emmanuel Temple (Bishop Altheimer's son) in the gospel and foudroyant ally.

Dr. C.C. Owens of the Religious Workers Guild, Chicago Illinois, was seated at the executive table also. A beautiful program was rendered with Minister Wayne Perryman as the evening's toastmaster. Superintendent Charles Smith delivered a timely and effective address in the Bishop's honor. Afterwards Dr. Owens presented Bishop Altheimer with a placque commemerating his thirty years of religious services in Washington State. Bishop R.E. Altheimer has led the state of Washington for one and one half years and his endeavors and magnitudinal accomplishments are noted and will forever be a part of Washington' s Church History. He has pastored Emmanuel Temple for almost thirty years. With God as his leader this man is a giant in the religious field. Washington State salutes its courageous and Beloved Bishop. Long may he live and lead us is our prayer.

Atlanta police searched for clues near the organ Mrs. Martin Luther King Sr. was playing Sunday when she was shot and killed. Her husband is pastor of the church, where a man was also killed and another man injured in the shooting.

Slain woman was shy, quiet

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Mrs. Martin Luther King Sr. stayed out of the limelight during the years her son preached nonviolence from the pulpit of the Ebenezer Baptist Church.

It was in the same red brick church in which the nation's great gathered to mourn the death of her son, Martin Luther King Jr., that she was fatally shot Sunday as she played the organ.

Her son was slain in Memphis, Tenn., on April 4, 1968.

A shy, reserved person, Mrs. King ever made speeches or gave interviews during the years her son was a leader in the civil rights movement.

She was no stranger to tragedy. Less than 15 months after Martin was slain, her second and last son, A. D. King, drowned in the backyard swimming pool of his home in Atlanta.

Mrs. King was the daughter of a Baptist minister, the late Rev. A. D. Williams. She married "Daddy" King, the son of a sharecropper, in Atlanta nearly 50 years ago and their three children were born in a white frame house only a few blocks from Ebenezer Church.

She had only one living child, Christine, who is married to Isaac Farris of Atlanta. Mrs. Farris is an assistant professor of eductation at Spelman College.

Death shocks congregations

Shock and dismay swept over congregations in many of Tacoma's predominantly black churches Sunday as pastors announced from the pulpit the slaying of Mrs. Martin Luther King Sr.

Particularly grief-stricken was the Rev. E. L. Horne, pastor of Mt. Tabor Baptist Church. Mr. Horne had met Martin Luther King's mother more than 30 years ago at a small college in Florida, where she toured with a church singing group.

"She was a wonderful person with a great talent," Mr. Horne recalled. "She was admired in her own right as well as for being the mother of a man like Dr. King. The irony of her death was terrible."

Mrs. King was shot and killed by a young black man while she was playing "The Lord's Prayer" at the organ in Atlanta's famed Ebenezer Baptist Church. Mrs. King's husband and her son had been co-pastors of the church at the height of the civil rights movement.

Mr. Horne said some in his congregation wept at the tragic news, while others reacted with anger.

Shock also greeted the announcement at the New Jerusalem Church of God in Christ in South Tacoma.

"Many were thinking how it was one more tragedy for a family that has known so much tragedy already," said Evelyn Morgan, daughter of Pastor T. L. Westbrook.

The Rev. Alfred C. Davis, pastor of Eastside Community Church, Church of God in Christ, said his congregation also was stunned by the announcement.

"It was a great loss especially because of what the Kings stood for — equality and sensitivity to the rights of others," Mr. Davis said.

"Martin Luther King was a great man because he was taught those principles by his mother and father."

Hundreds mourn Mrs. King

Mrs. King

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Mourners by the hundreds today filed past the casket of Mrs. Martin Luther King Sr. at Ebenezer Baptist Church, where she was killed Sunday by a gunman during a church service.

The body of Mrs. King, mother of the late civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr., lay in a pastel pink coffin at the altar, only a few feet from the organ which she was playing when she was killed.

The FBI entered the case Monday on the direction of the Civil Rights Division of the U.S. Justice Department, primarily to investigate the possibility of a conspiracy.

Leo Conroy, head of the Atlanta FBI office, said the FBI investigation was being conducted "here and in Ohio and certain other places that might be relevant."

Mrs. King, 69, was shot to death Sunday in the simple red brick church near downtown Atlanta while she sat at the organ and the choir sang "The Lord's Prayer." A church deacon also was killed and a church member wounded when a young black man opened fire with two pistols.

Funeral services for Mrs. King were set for Wednesday.

Problems, Problems

Don't you wish you had their problems?

The NFLPA (National Football League Player's Association) went on strike this week to protest the "unfair labor practices" used by the owners of the NFL teams. According to the charges filed by the NFLPA, the owners have refused to "bargain in good faith" and are trying to "undermine the union."

Poor babies.

What the players want, apparently, is "the right of a player to move from one team to another when his contract has expired," in the words of union president Bill Curry. That means when a star player, a Paul Warfield or a Jim Kiick or a Larry Czonka, has played out his contract with the team he is now with, he can turn to the rest of the teams and say, "OK, what am I bid for my services?"

I suppose that is a sort of democratic situation; I don't know what us poor reporters would do if newspapers signed us with a reserve clause. But then, the newspaper market is a lot different than the football market: there are hundreds of newspapers in this country--there are only 28 NFL teams.

And of those 28, maybe half a dozen have the money, the BIG money. (Like, New York, Los Angeles, Chicago, etc.) If the big-name players were to offer their services to the highest bidders, who would come away with most of the big-name players?

New York, Los Angeles, Chicago, etc.

Where would that leave the "small town" teams like Houston and Miami and Green Bay and Seattle? Well, Miami has what they call a "no-name" defense," that is, there are no big-name players. But that defense works, as two consecutive Super Bowl championships have proved; and those "no-name" players would go to the highest bidders (New York et al) as fast as the Warfields-Kiicks-Czonkas. Miami (who currently has Warfield, Kiick and Czonka under contract) could wind up just another team.

But the players don't care about Dolphin Dynasties or who the highest bidders would be. They want their freedom...which translates to, they want to be able to extort more money out of their employers.

It doesn't seem to occur to many of them that they already have all the freedom they probably could want, in the form of the new World Football League. Here the NFL players already have a bargaining lever: pay me more, Mr. NFL owner, or I will sell my services to the highest WFL bidder when my contract is expired.

In fact, those big-name players I mentioned (Warfield, Kiick and Czonka) were the first to take this route from rags to riches when they signed with the Toronto (now Memphis) WFL team for around three million dollars. Of course, they can't play for the WFL yet because their NFL contracts don't run out for a couple of years yet.

Which means they're still members of the NFLPA and, as such, on strike to gain absolute freedom for NFL players.

Don't you wish you had their problems?

A fault recognized is half corrected.

She's finally a grad at 72

FRESNO, CALIF. — The granddaughter of an illiterate slave will keep a promise to her grandmother years ago when she graduates Friday from Fresno City College at 72.

"It's always been my dream," said Cora Lee Johnson. "I always wanted to go to school because my grandmother, she was a slave and didn't get to go."

So Mrs. Johnson says she promised her grandmother that she would get as much education as she possibly could.

But the dream and the promise had to wait while the native of Hattiesburg, Miss., raised nine children, five of whom earned college degrees.

Picking up in 1972 where she left off decades ago could have been a problem, but Mrs. Johnson says it didn't take her long to catch on again — "even though I didn't go to school, I was always studying."

She says that at her age, education is aimed not at a better job but at personal fulfillment.

Armed with her two-year degree in sociology from Fresno City College, Mrs. Johnson says she now plans to complete work on a bachelor's degree at Fresno State University.

"I like dealing with people. I have always had an incentive to learn," she says. "I've always been curious about philosophical questions."

Of her fellow students, most young enough to be her grandchildren, she said, "They are just wonderful, much better than people my age. They have life in the right perspective. They see a person as a person."

Mrs. Johnson, who calls her black skin a "badge of distinction," says racial issues have changed since she last attended school.

"In my day you were white and I was black. There was a difference. That's not so today. We should be the best we can be — whether black or white."

How do her children take the idea of their mother going to college?

"They think I'm bullheaded, but they know I've always wanted to go," she said. "I think they're all proud of me."

Head Start vacancies to be filled

The Tacoma School District is accepting applications for vacancies in its Head Start program in the Central Area and East Side, school officials announced.

Children are eligible if their faminly income falls below certain federal standards. Children must be 4 years old by Sept. 10. The program provides educational, nutritional and health services to disadvantaged chiidren.

Parents seeking to enroll children should contact their neighborhood school or the early childhood education office at the Central Administration Building.

2 named to state council

Richard Dale Smith, vice president of the University of Puget Sound and Tacoma port commissioner, and Norton Clapp, chairman of the board of Weyerhaeuser Co., have been appointed by Gov. Dan Evans to the advisory council of the State Department of Commerce and Economic Development. Their terms will begin immediately and expire July 1, 1975.

Schools adopt hiring plan for women, minorities

The Tacoma School Board Thursday, adopted without fanfare an affirmative-action program for hiring women and minorities.

Directors and administrators made no comment as the board approved a plan that has been more than seven months in the making.

Aimed mainly at certificated employes — teachers and counselors — the program calls for the district to match its certificated minority employes with the minority percentage in the city's work force within two years.

THE DISTRICT will need to hire 25 minority educators each of the next two years to meet that goal.

To lend weight to the program, Dr. Eugene Breckenridge, the district's highest-ranking black administrator, was named assistant superintendent for affirmative action and community affairs. Breckenridge previously was an administrative assistant.

The program calls for an "aggressive" recruitment program for the next five years to meet minority-hiring goals. The program also emphasizes training and promoting minorities and women within the district to administrative positions.

"We're not looking for numbers — we're looking for quality," newly appointed Associate Supt. Del Cross said Thursday. "And we believe those people are available."

CROSS JOINED Breckenridge and a committee representing district employes and minority groups in drafting the program. The committee will continue to meet quarterly to monitor the program.

Of the district's 3,500 employes, about 11 per cent are members of minority races, compared to 8.9 per cent minorities in the city's total work force. However, most of the district's minority employes are non-professional workers.

Minorities make up only 6.8 per cent of the district's professional employes, compared to 18.7 per cent of the district's non-professional workers, who include secretaries, maintenance and food-service workers and custodians.

Manpower applications available

Anyone with a plan for using Pierce County manpower funds has to pick up an application form by Friday, according to County Commission Chairman Clay Huntington.

Public agencies, nonprofit organizations and individuals can get the forms at the Pierce County Manpower Training Council office in room 313 at 950 Fawcett Ave.

The proposals must be back in the office by July 12, Huntington said.

The program provides federal money for training and jobs for unemployed and under-employed persons.

The Massachusetts state auditor reports that his state paid $25,872 to help a welfare recipient lose weight. Wonder what the price was per pound?
